A DAY IN THE LIFE OF A SPACE ADVENTURER

It is March, 15, 2354. My name is Barry Whistler and this is my 79th day on the board of an intergalactic spaceship "Standust". I think I should start to write down my thoughts as some kind of personal blog. Still don't know why I decided this: I never was a public person and, here in outer space, there is no audience at all. Well, except for my crew, of course, but these guys prefer doing some boring things instead of listening to me. Lame!

Within a few days we will pass the BETA-f21 conscellation. Captain told us that it will take a little while, and after that route we will finally land on some planet in Terra-3. The whole crew is really exhausted. But as for me, the only thing I feel right now is boredom!

I remember my first days on this spaceship. I've never been in outer space before. Boy, I was so excited! But then the routine appeared. One day changed another, nothing new or interesting didn't happen. At all.

Man, I really miss my mom's pancakes! Right now I am sitting in the spaceship kitchen, if you can even call it a "kitchen". This mechanic box with buttons and wires, which is supposed to be our cook, is driving me nuts! Some folks from my crew call him "Char-Lee". What a stupid name, I tell you what. This "Char-Lee" of yours, he is just a tin can! I tried to chitchat with him about three weeks ago, but he didn't say a single word that is worth listening. And right now he just keeps asking me what kind of topping I would prefer for my meal...

I really hope that tomorrow will bring me something new to describe in my blog. Over.
