Writing Just sing!

- Hurry up, Frank! Are you ready?
I'm looking into the mirror when my friend Jim enters the room.
He's quite anxious before the performance in which we take part today. Jim is a song-writer, the author of my songs and also my great supporter; he is the kindest person I've ever met. I can't answer anything. I'm so exhausted even though I haven't performed yet! I watch my pale face in the mirror and I don't understand how can this man make the audience laugh and cry by his songs...
- I don't want to perform, - I say to Jim. - I can't do that. You know, I am the worst singer in the world...
- Don't worry, Frank, - laughs Jim and smiles Jim and touches my shoulder. - I understand you. Forget about everything! Just sing. And you'll pass this life exam with flying colors.
- ... I enter the stage, trembling. I'm so shocked and that I hardly move; but I remember Jim's words. I take my guitar and I start to play and sing, trying to forget about everything. I make mistakes, but I don't notice it; it seems that I've coped my fear.
- ... - They are astonished by your singing, - says Jim to me when I come back. - They want you to return and to continue to sing! I'm proud of you! - he embraces me, - You're the greatest singer ever!
- But for your help I couldn't fulfill this hard task, - I smile. - I just sang and forgot about everything.
It was my first experience on the stage.

Успешно?!
