"Good" school teachers.

School teachers are very important for our education. A good teacher can motivate you and make the most boring subject your favourite, but what qualities do they need to be called like that?

First of all, they must like their subject. I used to hate geography, but when we got a new teacher, I found it very interesting, because she talked about it with compassion. They should also be nice to students - it's very rude when a teacher yells at you or underestimates your abilities. I personally like it when you can come to your teacher to get some advice or just talk about something, because it means that you have some connection and they see you as a person, not just a student. Like I can come to my Russian teacher and ask her for help, because she always has something to say.

Teachers are our main (and sometimes the only one) source of knowledge, and we should respect them no matter what we think about them. We come to school to learn, and being able to educate is the only quality of a teacher that really matters.
