This is unlike anything that I have ever ¹⁰ seen before. As a kid, I would hear stories of god-like knights who would race through the battleground and destroy anything in their path. But this isn't any story, this is ²⁰ my life. This is something different, this is war.

People are ³⁰ dying left and right, blood is gushing out of ⁴⁰ my shoulder, the adrenalin is pumping ⁵⁰ through my veins, this is the moment that I have been training the past six months for, and yet I'm paralysed. Out of the ⁶⁰ corner of my eye, I see my good friend, Matthew, getting ⁷⁰ obliterated by an explosion. I don't even have enough time to comprehend the gruesome death, when I ⁸⁰ hear the sarge yell: "Get down!". Falling head first into the mud, I ⁹⁰ close my eyes and wonder just for a second what life would've been like without any violence. Snapping back into reality, with the taste of dirt in my mouth and grit beneath my ¹⁰⁰ fingernails, I look around for some ¹¹⁰ cover.

Guts and sprays of blood are flying through the thick air, ¹²⁰ the roar is almost unbearable, and yet at this ¹³⁰ moment, I remembered ¹⁴⁰ my family. Pictures of my wife and children flash before my eyes, ¹⁵⁰ tears are ~~springing~~ ¹⁶⁰ springing to the surface, ~~and so~~ ¹⁷⁰ I take a deep breath.

I get ¹⁸⁰ up, hold the rifle close to my chest and remember ¹⁹⁰ my father's words: "You are the man of the house, you provide the food for the family as well as protection, everything you do for your family must be ²⁰⁰ out of love. Cherish them no matter what son, they are the ²¹⁰ most important thing in life." I take a final breath, ²²⁰ ~~rem~~ saying to myself: "This is for my country, this is for my family," and charge forward. ²³⁰
