Nowadays, we have a plenty of goods we can buy. They are divided into groups. For example, food, drinks, electronics and toys. Toys is a special group of goods for children, and some parents buy their children very many toys. But some people say, that buying too many toys is not good for children. So, we need to understand, which is better: to buy children lots of toys or not.

On the one hand, there are some holidays on which we need to give presents. And children often expect that their parents will buy them a toy. It is understandable, that through the years a number of toys presented to children will increase.

On the other hand, toys are becoming more and more expensive. And money, which parents didn't spend on toys, could be spent on education or medicine. It is much better for the children, than one more toy. Moreover, some toys are getting forgotten and thrown in cupboards. There is no need to buy children toys, which they will forget after some months.

To sum up, I can say, that there is some sense in buying a plenty of toys. But, from my point of view, there are some more important things on which parents can spend their money.
