Writing The best book to base a movie on.

Recently <sup>gr log</sup> whole <sup>co</sup> Internet was discussing the new Netflix series called "Wednesday". But hardly anyone knows that the characters in <sup>30 gr</sup> this series are based on a series of comic strips from old newspaper. Shocking, isn't it? So Today I'd like to show <sup>50</sup> you why I want Netflix or some other company to make a film, based on my favourite book, called "The Seven Deaths of Evelyn Hardcastle".

Well, I have to say that making a film, based on the plot of this book is a great challenge. This book is a detective story about a man, who is stuck in a time loop, trying to solve a murder. The crucial thing is that he has amnesia and every time he wakes up, he finds himself in a different body. He is able to communicate with his past and future selves, but the time is very limited. This book has everything that a proper detective story should have: murder mystery, tangled story and a bunch of characters, plotting revenge.

I can only imagine how hard it would be for actors to deal with such a confusing plot. Speaking of actors. It would be rather easy to find a proper cast, the hard part is that they would have to act the same way several times as they are stuck in a loop.

So, my dear readers. I really hope that I managed to prove you my point on why Netflix has to make a movie, based on my favourite book. And more than that I hope that you too are now interested in this.
