Fashion is changing at the furious rate nowadays. Every year a new clothing is considered fashionable. What will trend clothes look like in the next century? Here's my thoughts.

To begin with, a lot of people like their casual clothes. I think it will keep up. To my mind, in 100 years people will wear clothes that we wear right now. Why? At first, every person has a nostalgia feeling. We in the future might remember our style, and may start wearing our clothes again. At second, future generation will be interested in our culture, so they will probably replicate our trends.

This is clear, but what will be the difference? My thought is that the clothes of the future might be made from different materials and, as well, have a similar, but not the same layout.

In conclusion, though a new trend element in clothing is introduced every year, our clothes that we wear almost all the time will be also popular next century. It might be a different shape, size or color, but it will definitely be a replica of our style. I think casual clothing is the most fashionable clothing.
